1. CENDRARS, Blaise

Moravagine.

Soft paper covers. In a special wooden-box designed by Antonio PEREZ-NORIEGA former student and collaborator of Jean de Gonet.

FIRST EDITION, one of the 110 copies on LAFUMA-NAVARRRE VELLUM PAPER.

Moravagine is the name of the central character; a madman escaped from the asylum by his psychiatrist. Together, they will then experience extraordinary adventures throughout Europe, Russia, the United States and South America.

Published in 1926, but worked on since 1919 and imagined since 1912, Moravagine is undoubtedly one of Blaise Cendrars' most curious novels.

A most beautiful copy in a very elegant box.

Of the estimated 450 copies of the edition, 425 remained with the publisher Poot as Rimbaud didn’t have the funds to pay for them. Found by chance by a Belgian bibliophile at the beginning of the XXth century, these miraculous copies didn’t reduce the value of the book, as interest in it increased with the number of copies available. Some of them had suffered from dampness and were unsaleable, and the “discoverer” put the others on the market a few at a time.

a furrowed path, there are the ridiculous dead, statufied like mummies who do their little Pompeis...”.

This is not really a dummy sample because there is a particular title and a table dedicated to this study. Part of the History of Forest Trees of North America published between 1810 and 1813.

François André Michaux (1770-1855), botanist, was the son of the eminent naturalist André Michaux. He obtained a medical degree in his native France and ventured as far north as Canada, as far south as Florida, and as far west as Kentucky and Tennessee during visits to America, 1785-90, 1801-03, and 1806-08. Michaux met the most prominent American botanists during his travels and published several works on botany and forestry. Having become acquainted with TJ, John Vaughan, Caspar Wistar, and other officers, Michaux secured election to the American Philosophical Society in 1809 and eventually left it a significant bequest. He spent much of his later life administering the Harcourt estate in Normandy, where he established France’s first public arboretum in 1851.
